

Impacting Communities across America

No matter where you live, hunger lives there, too.

Hunger affects everyone. From the nice family down the street with a newborn to your elderly neighbor on a fixed income to your child's classmate who has trouble paying attention, hunger could be affecting many different people in your community. As a result, people are pouring into food pantries, soup kitchens, and other agencies served by our network of member food banks.

Making a lasting impact on the lives of your neighbors.

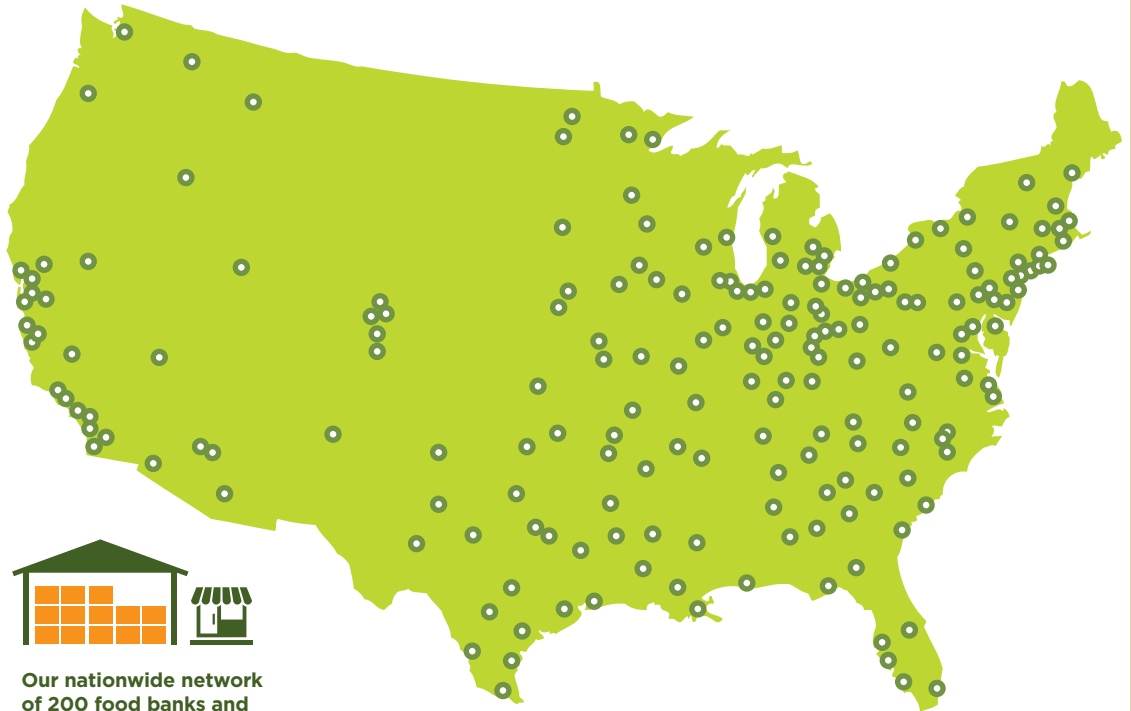

Thanks to your support, network food banks are on the ground, every day in nearly every community in the country feeding people in need. The unique and dynamic partnership between the national office and each local food bank is the power of Feeding America.

1 in 7
Americans struggles to get enough to eat.

How do our networks distribute so much food?

The Feeding America network of food banks operate a fleet of more than 2,300 trucks, vans and other vehicles, moving food quickly, safely and efficiently from food sources — to people facing hunger.

Mobile pantries allow us to provide food to underserved areas with few food pantries — and transport perishable foods like fresh produce and lean meats.

Our nationwide network of 200 food banks and 60,000 food pantries and meal programs provides food and services to people each year.

Our network of 200 food banks is dedicated to serving children, families and individuals all across America.